(Summarized from 2015-16 GenUP/BICUP materials)
Major changes are coming October 3, 2015 to the disclosure and settlement forms used in most residential loan transactions. The former Good Faith Estimate will be replaced by the Loan Estimate and two Closing Disclosure forms, one for the buyer and one for the seller, will replace the HUD-1 settlement statement. The timing of the delivery of these forms/dislosures will also be strictly defined and mandated.
While a broker’s responsibilities regarding these matters will not change, it is important that residential brokers are informed regarding these new forms and requirements.
The new TILA-RESPA integrated disclosure rules (TRID rules) were required by the Dodd-Frank Act to eliminate duplicate forms lenders were required to provide under TILA and RESPA. The new integrated disclosure forms, the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosures, must be used by lenders in transactions involving federally related mortgage loans governed by RESPA as well as loans for personal, family, or household purposes subject to the Truth in Lending Act (TILA). What triggers the new rules is receipt of a loan application on or after October 3, 2015 for a loan made by an institutional lender and/or to be sold in the secondary market that will be secured by a lien against real property owned by the borrower. Essentially, the new rules will affect most residential transactions involving a mortgage.
Beginning October 3rd, lenders must provide a Loan Estimate (or denial) to prospective borrowers within three (3) business days of loan application so long as the borrower has provided the lender the following information: 1) legal name, 2) (See RESPA, page 6)

Schools and Instructors
Outstanding Examination Performance Records
July 1, 2014 - June 30, 2015

The Commission monitors applicant performance on the license examination and regularly reports this information to schools and instructors. In particular, the Commission uses information about the performance of applicants who are taking the licensing examination for the first time in order to assure that quality instruction is being provided in prelicensing courses by schools and instructors. The most recent performance record for each school can be found on the Commission's website at http://www.ncrec.gov/Pdfs/Schools/LicExamPerfRep.pdf.

The overall examination performance (passing rate) for all first-time candidates taking the comprehensive real estate examination for the license year July 1, 2014 – June 30, 2015 was 60%. The Commission congratulates each of the following schools and instructors for achieving an outstanding examination performance record of 80% or higher during the most recent annual reporting period. The Commission recognizes that to have students perform at such a level on the license examination requires a combination of high quality instruction and high course completion standards.

Bell was the 2010 president of the Winston-Salem Regional Association of REALTORS® and its 2009 REALTOR® of the Year and was inducted into the North Carolina Association of REALTORS® Hall of Fame in 2014.

Broker Numbers
As of September 1, 2015, there are 91,752 brokers licensed by the Real Estate Commission in the following categories:

- Active Brokers 57,819
- (Active Provisional Brokers 5,684)
- Inactive Brokers 23,287
- (Inactive Provisional Brokers 4,235)
- Firms 10,646
- Brokers-in-Charge 15,870
Software vendors may submit their trust account software products to the Real Estate Commission for review. Commission staff evaluates Trust Account Software for compliance with the North Carolina Real Estate Commission Rules, in particular, Commission Rule A.0117. In order to be deemed compliant, a vendor must demonstrate that the software will generate the reports required to be maintained by the Commission Rules. Those reports include:

- Trust Account Journal
- Supplemental Deposit Worksheet
- Supplemental Disbursement Worksheet
- Ledger
- Bank Reconciliation
- Ledger Trial Balance

The list of compliant Trust Account Software can be found on the Commission’s website at www.ncrec.gov/resources/TrustAccount.

If a Broker-in-Charge (BIC) chooses not to use Trust Account software on the compliant list, it would be prudent for that BIC to verify that the Trust Account software generates the reports listed above. The BIC may also want to confirm that the software provides other utilities that the company needs to run the real estate business. The Commission doesn’t evaluate the Trust Account software’s management utility beyond the requirements of the Commission’s rules. For example, if your company is looking for Trust Account software to manage 100 long term rentals, can the software:

- Generate a report on the tenants delinquent on rent payments
- Prepare documents for summary ejectments
- Create and track work orders for repair request
- Generate a report on properties available for rent, etc.

A big concern in choosing computer software is support. Are you going to be able to get support you need when you need it? You may want to call the Support phone number and/or send them an email before purchasing the software and see what kind of response you get. Remember, too, that in order to function properly, any software must be kept updated. Brokers should plan on and budget for required updates of software systems.

Another major consideration in choosing Trust Account software is the installation of the software. Do you have existing records on a software program that you would like to transfer to the new software? Can you transfer tenant and owner information to the new software? Will Support help you set up the initial Trust Account balances during the installation of the software? If the Trust Account balances are not set up properly during the installation process, then you are going to have problems reconciling the bank balance to the Trust Account Journal in the software and balancing the Ledgers to the Trust Account journal.

Software vendors are now trending toward web-based Trust Account applications. Web-based software is more expensive, but depending on the vendor, the software can do more for the company such as:

- Provide a website for marketing
- Online leasing applications
- Tenant screening
- Rent collection online
- Text messaging
- Emailing
- Owner and tenant portals
- Disburse owner payments and expenses online
- Store data on an off-site server

The Commission does not evaluate Trust Account software for any of these attributes. It is up to the user to decide whether or not to use web-based software. Be sure to discuss with the vendor the benefits and risks of using a web-based software.

statement of gross income, 3) Social Security Number, 4) property address, 5) estimate of property value, and 6) amount of mortgage loan requested. The lender may request other information, but may not require documentary support of the information prior to issuing a Loan Estimate.

Of greater importance to brokers are the new Closing Disclosures, one for the borrower/buyer and the other for the seller. The Closing Disclosure is a statement of final loan terms and closing costs.

TRID rules permit a settlement agent to provide the seller with a separate Closing Disclosure or with a copy of the Buyer/Borrowers’ Closing Disclosure as long as it contains all of the seller’s transaction information. If the settlement agent provides the seller with a separate Disclosure, then the settlement agent must also provide a copy of the Seller Closing Disclosure to the borrower’s lender, but not to the borrower. While the buyer will not necessarily see the Sellers’ Closing Disclosure, the buyer will have a summary of the sellers’ side of the transaction on page 3 of the buyer’s Closing Disclosure, as with the current HUD-1.

A broker’s obligations concerning the accuracy of settlement statements have not substantially changed with the new forms; however, the information will be found in different locations. The Commission is aware that in some cases, brokers may not have access to the form for the other side of the transaction.

The change that may have the most significant impact is the requirement that the lender must ensure that the borrower receives the completed Borrower Closing Disclosure three business days prior to consummation (defined as the point at which the borrower becomes obligated to the loan). If the Closing Disclosure is delivered to the borrower by any method other than personally, the lender generally must add three more business days for delivery, meaning that it must be sent not later than six business days prior to settlement. For Closing Disclosure purposes, “business day” includes Saturdays, excluding only Sundays and ten federal public holidays. If it is mailed or delivered electronically, the borrower is considered to have received the Closing Disclosure three business days after it is delivered or placed in the mail. However, if the lender has evidence that the borrower received the Closing Disclosure earlier than three business days after it is mailed or delivered, it may rely on that evidence and consider it to be received on that date. For example, if the borrower has consented to receive the Disclosure by email and then acknowledges receipt of the Disclosure by email, the three-day clock starts from the date the borrower acknowledged receipt.

THE 3/6-DAY TIMELINE FOR ADVANCE DELIVERY OF THE BORROWER’S CLOSING DISCLOSURE IS MANDATORY AND GENERALLY CANNOT BE WAIVED. While it is the lender’s responsibility to comply with these requirements, brokers must educate their clients and customers about these timelines. Other important facts to know:

1) The 3/6-day advance delivery applies only to the Borrower’s Closing Disclosure. There is no rule requiring advance delivery of the Seller’s Closing Disclosure. Delivery must be to the borrowers personally, not to a broker acting as a buyer agent.

2) The lender, not the settlement agent, will decide whether to issue one or two separate Closing Disclosures and any other settlement statements. If the lender decides to issue two separate Closing Disclosures, a broker acting as a dual agent should only give each party that party’s Disclosure.

3) Only three changes will require a new borrower Closing Disclosure and a new three-day waiting period:

• An increase in the APR,
• A change in the loan product, or
• The addition of a prepayment penalty.

For any other changes, the lender must still provide a corrected Closing Disclosure with the terms or costs that have changed and ensure that the consumer receives it. However, no additional three-business-day waiting period is required.

While this article has covered the important highlights of the new TRID rules, it is only a cursory treatment of the topic. TRID is a primary focus of the 2015-16 Update Course, both General and BICUP. Brokers involved in residential sales transactions are strongly urged to take the applicable Update Course as soon as possible to be informed and prepared for these significant changes in the residential mortgage loan process.

Allan R. Dameron Legal Internship Award
Campbell University second-year law students Emily Massey and Joshua Stewart, both of Raleigh, are the recipients of Allan R. Dameron Legal Internship Awards. Then Commission Chairman Thomas R. Lawing, Jr., and Vice Chairman (now Chairman) Cindy S. Chandler presented the awards at the Commission’s June meeting. The annual award is in memory of and tribute to former Commission Chairman Dameron for his dedicated service in protecting the interests of consumers.

The U.S. Federal Housing Administration (FHA) has announced that, for the first time since 2010, it will not extend its waiver of the “anti-flipping rule”; which means that, effective December 31, 2014, federal regulations will prohibit the use of FHA-insured financing to purchase single family properties that are resold within 90 days of their previous acquisition.

The FHA defines “property flipping” as the practice in which recently acquired properties are resold for a considerable profit at an artificially inflated price, often as the result of a lender’s collusion with an appraiser [or other transaction participants, such as mortgage originators and real estate licensees.]

According to the FHA, most property flipping occurs within a matter of days after acquisition, and usually with only minor cosmetic improvements, if any, to the property.

In an effort to preclude the practice with respect to FHA-insured mortgages, HUD issued a final rule in May 2003 [24 CFR 203.37a] that prohibits the issuance of FHA insurance if the contract of purchase and sale for the property securing the mortgage is executed within 90 days of the prior acquisition by the seller.

Under the rule, re-sales occurring between 91 and 180 days and between 91 days and one year, from acquisition may be eligible for FHA insurance, subject to special valuation documentation requirements. Exemptions from the resale restrictions apply to HUD and other federal agency sales of real estate-owned (REO) properties, sales by approved nonprofit organizations, sales by state- and federally-chartered financial institutions and government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs), and sales of properties in designated federal disaster areas.

In 2010, the FHA waived the 90-day anti-flipping rule in order to encourage investors to renovate foreclosed and abandoned homes, help stabilize real estate prices and support communities with high foreclosure activity.

To qualify for the waiver, transactions had to be “arm’s length” (as defined by the waiver rules) and if the sale price was more than 20 percent above the seller’s acquisition cost, the lender was required to take specific steps to document and justify the increase.

FHA’s waiver of the 90-day rule has been periodically extended through 2014, with strong support from industry groups such as the National Association of REALTORS®. However, the Office of the Inspector General for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban development (OIG-HUD) recently issued a report raising concerns about HUD’s oversight of lender compliance with the waiver requirements. The OIG report estimated that the situation presented significant risk to the FHA Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund (MMIF), which supports the insurance program. The OIG recommended that HUD either strengthen its oversight controls or discontinue the waiver at the end of 2014. FHA apparently has made its choice, announcing in early December that it will not extend the waiver beyond December 31, 2014.

In a November news release, RealtyTrac®, “the nation’s leading source for comprehensive housing data”, released its “Q3 2014 U.S. Home Flipping Report” showing that 26,947 U.S. single family homes were “flipped” (purchases followed by re-sales within 12 months) nationwide in the third quarter of 2014.

The statistic represents 4.0 percent of all U.S. single family home sales and is down from 4.6 percent in the second quarter of 2014 and 5.6 percent in the third quarter of 2013; the lowest level since the second quarter of 2009.

Follow us on
When listing and selling properties in residential subdivisions, especially newly developed subdivisions, brokers should check on the status of the streets (public vs. private). Brokers should not assume that all streets are public. All streets essentially begin as private streets and some eventually become public streets.

A public street is one that was constructed in compliance with state standards and then was transferred to the NCDOT - usually upon the sale of a certain number of dwellings along the street or in the subdivision.

Upon acceptance of a street by the NCDOT, ownership and maintenance of the street will lie with the NCDOT. During the period between the construction of the street and the transfer of the street to the NCDOT, the developer and/or the lot owners are responsible for street maintenance. A street that is constructed to state standards, but falls into disrepair while waiting for the NCDOT to accept the street, may have to be repaired by the developer and/or residents before the NCDOT will accept it.

Private streets may or may not be constructed to state standards and the responsibility for maintaining them remains with the developer and/or the residents who live along the street. Persons who live on private streets that were not constructed in compliance with State standards would be wise to have a written road maintenance agreement signed by all of the property owners on that street.

Pursuant to North Carolina General Statute § 136-102.6(f), developers are required to give lot purchasers a subdivision street disclosure statement. This requirement applies to the first sale of a lot. Brokers who list lots for developers should remind the developers of the requirement.

There is no standard preprinted form for making this disclosure. Brokers assisting buyers of lots from developers should request a copy of the disclosure statement from the developer. Brokers listing and/or selling homes in relatively new subdivisions should inquire about the status of the roads, because the roads may not have been transferred to the NCDOT and a buyer may bear some or all of the responsibility for road maintenance until this transfer occurs.

The high cost of maintaining and repairing streets makes the status of a street a material fact. Over the years, the Commission has dealt with a number of complaints, usually from buyers who learned after their closings that the streets in their subdivision were private and that they would share in the cost of maintaining and repairing the roads.

In a few cases, buyers learned shortly after their closings that the neighborhoods were preparing to issue assessments to obtain the money necessary to repair the streets. In one case, the buyer of an unimproved lot in a 20-year old subdivision learned that the streets in his section of the neighborhood were private. Two years later, the streets had fallen into such disrepair that public school buses and emergency vehicles were unable to travel the streets.

Astute brokers will add “Verify street status” to their regular transaction checklist and verify the status of streets in order to better protect their clients. To verify that a street has been accepted into the State system, you may visit either the NCDOT website, https://apps.ncdot.gov/srlookup/, and enter the necessary information or go to www.ncdot.gov/doh/divisions/, hover over each division on the state map to determine the correct division for the county in which a road is located, click on the correct division and select “Directory” to contact someone within that division to confirm that a street has been accepted into the state system.

Verifying that a street has or has not been accepted into the State system will better protect your clients as well as reduce the incidence of complaints and the likelihood of disciplinary actions against brokers.

Title Company Marketing Service Agreements Draw $200,000 RESPA Penalty

The following article is copyrighted by and reprinted with the permission of the Association of Real Estate License Officials (ARELLO).

A recent enforcement action announced by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) serves as a timely reminder of federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) provisions that govern the business relationships, and marketing services agreements in particular, between "settlement service providers" including real estate licensees.

Among those provisions, RESPA section 8(a) prohibits giving or accepting a "fee, kickback, or thing of value" pursuant to an agreement or understanding to refer business relates to real estate settlement services for a federally-related mortgage loan [12 U.S.C. section 2607(a)]. Covered services include, but are not limited to, those provided by title companies attorneys, surveyors, appraisers, real estate agents/brokers, mortgage loan originators and others.

In the real estate industry, marketing services agreements (MSAs) are sometimes executed to create a business relationship in which a real estate brokerage agrees to market or promote the services of a title or mortgage company, for example, which pays a marketing fee to the brokerage. In general, such agreements are not necessarily unlawful. However, any "fee, kickback or thing of value" that is given or accepted for the referral of settlement service business violates RESPA and can have serious consequences; such as cases in which MSAs are used to circumvent RESPA through payments to real estate brokers that are disguised as advertising or marketing fees.

In its recent announcement, the CFPB said that Michigan-based Lighthouse Title will pay a $200,000 civil monetary penalty for illegal "quid pro quo" agreements. The CFPB found that the company entered into MSAs with various companies, including real estate brokers, with the understanding that the companies would refer mortgage closing and title insurance business. According to the CFPB, the agreements made it appear that payments would be based on marketing services the companies would provide to Lighthouse. However, the CFPB said, "... Lighthouse actually set the fees it would pay under the MSAs, in part, by considering the number of referrals it received or expected to receive from each company." The CFPB also found that "The companies on average referred significantly more business to Lighthouse when they had MSAs than when they did not." Pursuant to a stipulated consent agreement, the company agreed to pay the civil penalty, but neither admitted nor denied the CFPB findings.

The CFPB’s announcement and consent order do not specifically identify the MSA terms, or the services provided by real estate agents and/or others, that allegedly violated RESPA. However, the order notes that repeat-
